Book and Tweety casually stroll up her walkway to Tweety's porch.

TWEETY

I had a good time.

BOOK

Me too. Oh, before I forget!

Book goes into his pocket and pulls out a heart shaped key chain. He hands it to Tweety.

TWEETY

What's this for?

BOOK

I don't know. I saw it and thought you might like it.

(Shrugs)

Listen, I wanna thank you for making the rest of my day suck.

TWEETY

What that mean?

BOOK

Spending time wit you is already the highlight of my day. It's all down hill from here.

Tweety smiles.

TWEETY

It's talking like that that lets me know you a player.

BOOK

Why is it so hard to believe that you could be the highlight of my day? I like the fact you undersell yourself...Because you pretty without trying. You don't use your looks as a currency. I like the fact that you say what you think...it means I never have to guess where I stand with you. I love the fact that you don't try to be...you just dope being you. Why wouldn't I think that the best part of my day is with you?

Tweety doesn't say anything. She doesn't have to. Her feelings are written all over her face.

Book narrows the ground between them. He reaches out and grabs her hands. Then he pulls her close until they are invading each other's space. They are gazing into each other's eyes.

BOOK

I wanna kiss you.

Tweety and Book lean into one another. He is about to kiss her.

BOOK

But I want you to respect me so I won't.

TWEETY

Man if you don't kiss me.

BOOK

Wh-

Tweety cuts off his words with a kiss.
